To describe the visual consequences of Descemet membrane detachment (DMD) after laser in situ keratomileusis (LASIK) and laser phototherapeutic keratectomy (LPTK) and the possible associated factors. Ten eyes of five patients with DMD after LASIK and 10 eyes of 5 patients with DMD after LPTK are examined retrospectively. The main outcome measures include pre- and postoperative visual acuity, anatomic outcome, intraocular pressure, presence or absence of pre- or postoperative complications, and the duration from the last laser procedure to the time of diagnosis. The preoperative best spectacle-corrected visual acuity (BSCVA) was 0.32 to 0.60 LogMAR in the post-LASIK group and 0.3 to 0.4 LogMAR in the post-LPTK group. A total of 44 surgical procedures were performed in 30 eyes, with a mean follow-up of 51.1 months (range, 38 to 66 months) in the post-LASIK group and 31.9 months (range, 23 to 36 months) in the post-LPTK group. Nine eyes in each group were treated with amniotic membrane transplantation. Three eyes from the post-LPTK group were treated with laser photocoagulation. All eyes except one were successfully reattached. In the post-LASIK group, three eyes developed rhegmatogenous retinal detachment
